The High Line is a public park built on an historic freight rail line elevated above the streets on Manhattan’s West Side. It is owned by the City of New York, and maintained and operated by Friends of the High Line. Founded in 1999 by community residents, Friends of the High Line fought for the High Line’s preservation and transformation at a time when the historic structure was under the threat of demolition. It is now the non-profit conservancy working with the New York City Department of Parks & Recreation to make sure the High Line is maintained as an extraordinary public space for all visitors to enjoy. In addition to overseeing maintenance, operations, and public programming for the park, Friends of the High Line works to raise the essential private funds to support more than 90 percent of the park’s annual operating budget, and to advocate for the preservation and transformation of the final section of the High Line at the rail yards.

Support from our members provides crucial funding for the ongoing maintenance and operations of the High Line, allowing us to hire gardeners to keep the park’s flowers and trees in peak condition, and maintenance crews to ensure the High Line is clean and safe for its visitors. Members receive a High Line newsletter, discounts at local stores, and other benefits. Visit www.thehighline.org to learn more.

The High Line is open daily. Hours vary by season. Visit www.thehighline.org or follow @highlinenyc on Twitter for the latest park information.

Friends of the High Line commissions temporary, large-scale, site-specific works of art for the park, offering a platform for visual, performance, and sound-based art by both emerging and established artists.

Friends of the High Line offers free and low-cost public programs, including talks, films, performances, tours, and family activities.

The High Line is fully wheelchair accessible.
